

CORPORATE MEMBER

Corporate membership

A corporate member is a fully qualified civil engineering surveyor and a voting member of the Institution.

Key benefits

- The award of the designatory letters MInstCES.
- Full recognition as a qualified civil engineering surveyor.
- ICES voting rights.
- The opportunity to become involved in the governance of the Institution (e.g. nomination for election to Council of Management).
- A monthly e-newsletter listing of news and technical events.
- Ten copies per year of the Institution journal, Civil Engineering Surveyor.
- Access to ICES regional events.

As a corporate member you are also invited to get involved in a number of ways. We always need well-informed volunteers in the following fields:

- Mentoring and sponsoring potential applicants for membership.
- Getting involved with your ICES regional committee to offer technical and social events, and to give support to local members.
- Becoming a review examiner, perhaps starting off with regional interviews for technical member applicants, before trying your hand on corporate review panels.
- Joining one of the core committees and panels so that you may feed back some of your expertise to other members.
- Giving careers advice in schools and colleges — this can be in the form of attendance at a careers fair or giving presentations.
